

InStyle

THE RIGHT DRESS FOR EVERY BODY
PAGE 262

Super
Fashion
Issue 490
Pages

145
Shoes & Bags!

Editor
Guides

7 MOST-WANTED ITEMS

BUYING SUNGLASSES

TREATING DARK CIRCLES

THE BEST FOUNDATION FOR YOU

SPRING

Shailene
Woodley

ON LOVE, GRATITUDE & LIVING A LIFE OF BEAUTIFUL SIMPLICITY

TRAVEL

Planning a Spring Break Trip? Whisk Yourself Away to One of The Bachelor's Top Vacation Destinations

For those of you who don't watch The Bachelor (?!), tonight marks the finale of season 20, and the end of Ben Higgins's (swoon) quest for love. While we've enjoyed every moment of the journey so far—who could forget Lace's dramatic exit, the horrendously awkward love lab group date, or Jubilee's declaration of love for hot dogs?—some of the most memorable scenes have taken place against exotic backdrops like Mexico City, the Bahamas, and Jamaica.

When we weren't busy laughing at the unfortunate swine attack in the Bay of Pigs, or cringing at the group's uncomfortable Spanish lesson, we found ourselves fantasizing about our own Bachelor-inspired spring break vacations. If you're still lusting after sun and sand, take a look below at every resort featured on the show this season.

The following week, Higgins and the women posted up at the beautiful Grand Isle Resort in Exuma, a district of the Bahamas. The resort was just as excited about its love-hungry guests as we were, and is currently offering a series of Bachelor-inspired vacation specials, like the "Roses in Paradise" package. When the women weren't chilling at the resort, they were literally being attacked by pigs on one of the, um, most unique group dates we've witnessed. Even if you're not a regular Bachelor viewer, it's worth watching this episode for a good laugh.