

Miami hotel openings on the horizon for 2016

New properties are popping up from Downtown to Miami Beach, The Florida Keys and Caribbean

So what else is on the horizon for Miami's hotel scene in 2016? As is so often the case, many of these hotels (The Langford, EAST, Playa Largo) have been on our radar for quite a while with the promise of opening in 2015. With the New Year just 10 short days away, they've missed the deadline on their original resolution. But new opening dates have been projected and this is the latest crop of hotels with promises to open in 2016, listed in chronological order.

The Langford - Downtown

Slated Opening Date: January 2016

Downtown Miami will soon have its own luxury boutique hotel when The Langford (pictured at top; 121 SE 1st St., Downtown; 305-537-7040) opens its doors at the beginning of the year. A designated National Register of Historic Places, the 12-story building, which once occupied the Miami National Bank, was built in 1925 in resplendent Beaux Arts architectural design. When the $20 million restoration is complete, the building will be transformed into a 125-room hotel boasting a two-story penthouse and a restaurant and rooftop cocktail lounge by Pubbelly Group.
