Part of this extensive research project entails meeting with locals to learn about different takes on generations-old Baja recipes like "cipais," a sweet and savory pasta dish with meat, carrots, potatoes, and dry fruit. In addition, Luis offers private culinary experiences for guests with fresh catches of the day, such as his signature beachfront clam roast in which he bakes clams directly in a large hole in the sand, as well as a robust ceviche table with a variety of fish and Baja-specific ingredients such as mogote plums, a fruit indigenous to the region's rock-formed hills.
