

What The Spectator Hotel is Charleston’s high-design, distinct boutique hotel for the well-heeled traveler located in Charleston’s charming Historic District featuring 41 bright, residential-style rooms.

The inspiration for The Spectator has multiple ties to Charleston’s rich history. The Spectator represents an elegance that was also found in the bustling French Quarter and Market Street districts where the hotel is located, making it a fitting name for one of the Holy City’s premier hotels – a place to see and be seen.

Recently named the No. 1 City Hotel in the Continental U.S. in the Travel + Leisure World’s Best Awards, The Spectator is a distinct boutique hotel for the well-heeled traveler. Inspired by the spirit of the Roaring Twenties, and designed with Art Deco meets Southern Charm, The Spectator enchants guests from the moment they enter with its personality mixing the best of the captivating charm of the Southern belle, the flair of the flapper, and the elegance of the socialite. The robust selection of complimentary amenities includes personal butler service, artisanal in-room breakfast, specialty welcome cocktails and a nightly cordial at turndown. The Spectator’s bar is a destination in itself, serving seasonal hand-crafted specialty cocktails using local ingredients and flavors in a Prohibition-era setting.
